Alberta Aboriginal Court Worker Program

The Aboriginal Court Worker program delivers province wide services to Aboriginal people who are involved in the justice system in either family or criminal court. The program is intended to facilitate and enhance access to justice by assisting Aboriginal people to obtain fair and culturally sensitive treatment in the justice system, especially during the court process. The Aboriginal Court Worker Program has both a criminal and family component. The Program has been in existence in Alberta for over 35 years.

Alberta Aboriginal Criminal Court Worker Program

Objective

Aboriginal Court Worker Program seeks to facilitate and enhance access to the justice system by Aboriginal people involved in the courts and to ensure they receive fair, equitable and culturally sensitive treatment.

- Provide all eligible Aboriginal persons appearing in court a program of counselling, other than legal advice in relation to court procedures, rights under the law and availability of legal aid or other resources and referral thereto of such persons who have been charged with an offence under any federal or provincial statute or municipal by-law.
- Assist Aboriginal people to understand their right to speak on their own behalf or to request legal counsel; to better understand the nature of the charges against them; and the philosophy and functioning of the criminal justice system.
- Assist in enhancing the awareness and appreciation by those involved in the administration of the criminal justice system of the values, customs, languages and socio-economic conditions of Aboriginals.

Cost

There is no cost in accessing this service.

Key Criteria

- Clients must be of Aboriginal ancestry.

What happens after? (only if required)

- The Aboriginal client will be provided with information on the nature of the charges, rights, court procedures, roles and responsibilities, alternative justice options and possible outcomes.
- The client will be provided with information and availability of legal and community social resources and make client referrals to these services as required.

Access

The Aboriginal Court Worker Program can be accessed at any point during the pre-court or court appearance process.

Alberta Law Libraries (ALL)

Objective

Located throughout the province, Alberta Law Libraries connects Albertans with information and research services. The libraries provide services to the legal community (judiciary, Justice and Solicitor General employees and bar), self-represented litigants and the public.

Alberta Law Libraries help by:

- providing reference and research services to members of the legal community.
- connecting self-represented litigants and members of the public with relevant legal information resources. Our team of skilled information professionals help clients find answers to their questions, from the location of forms and precedents to the provision of self-help legal materials, books, articles, case law and legislation reflecting their specific information needs.
- educating Albertans about the Canadian justice system and on the identification and effective use of reliable legal information sources, both print and electronic.
- providing access to an impressive array of electronic legal research tools and a vast print collection of legal materials.
- supplying referrals to other relevant organizations as needed.

Cost

Access to legal reference assistance and the Alberta Law Libraries' collections is provided to all Albertans. There is no cost to access this service.

Key Criteria

Our team will guide clients, including self-represented litigants and members of the public, to reliable sources of legal information without giving legal advice.

Access

Hours vary throughout the province, please contact your local library, or check the website at <https://www.lawlibrary.ab.ca/> for hours of operation prior to visiting the library.

Reference services may also be accessed online using our Ask a Law Librarian service or via e-mail at all.cal@gov.ab.ca (Calgary) or all.edm@gov.ab.ca (Edmonton).

Information Services: Self Help

Objective

Information Services provides information, materials, assistance and referrals to the general public (particularly self-represented parties), the legal community, the judiciary and government offices/agencies regarding court procedures and documentation required for most legal matters.

Civil (non-family) and criminal issues: Information Services staff provides information and assistance locating forms and general guidance on the use of court forms. Referrals are provided to non-government agencies to obtain legal advice.

Family Law issues: Information Services has available all the prescribed forms for court applications under the Family Law Act and the Interjurisdictional Support Orders Act as well as a number of fill in the blank forms to assist individuals with various applications under The Divorce Act. Most forms and packages are also available on the RS website www.rcas.alberta.ca in a fillable format.

Information Services offices provide information and/or procedural assistance on many topics relating to civil, criminal and family matters, including:

Civil matters

- Wills and Estates
- Bankruptcy
- Residential Tenancy Matters & appeals
- Court of Appeal
- Provincial Civil Appeals
- Civil Restraining Orders

Criminal matters

- Summary Conviction appeals

Family Matters

- Child Support
- Spousal Support
- Child custody/access or parenting time
- Guardianship of a child
- Enforcement of time with a child
- Divorce & corollary relief
- Family violence
- Emergency protection orders

- Court Generated Orders Court of Queen's Bench, family and civil

This service assists self-represented parties whose hearing in the Court of Queen's Bench results in a court order. Court clerks prepare the order and ensure it is filed with the court and that copies are provided to the parties, often on the day it is ordered.

Family Court Assistance

Objective

Assessment Services provides several services to assist self-represented parties with their court matter and ensure courtroom matters flow smoothly.

- Family Court Counsellors (FCCs) - Provincial Court, Family
Family Court Counsellors help self-represented parties in the Provincial courtroom navigate their family law matter. FCCs meet with the parties before court to discuss the issues, promote collaboration, explore options and make referrals, including to mediation if possible. They assess the parties' readiness for court, and assist the parties to prepare for the courtroom experience. They assist the court by introducing the parties, providing a summary of the matters to be addressed, noting helpful resources when possible for the court, and facilitating referrals.
- Caseflow Conference limited locations
Caseflow Conference is a program in the Provincial Court of Alberta and is required in Calgary, Edmonton & Grande Prairie. It is also mandatory for Family Law Act applications filed in Calgary Court of Queen's Bench. It is an alternative to a docket appearance in court before a judge. Matters are set to Caseflow Conference when someone without a lawyer applies to the Provincial Court about a child-related matter. Represented parties may use the program if they wish. The Caseflow Conference is a meeting which provides the parties the opportunity to talk about the issues in a private, less formal atmosphere than a courtroom. Parties are provided information regarding resources available to help them in resolving their dispute such as mediation and attending courses. If the parties consent, a draft court order can be created for a judge to review. The parties do not have to appear in court for the judge's review.

Cost

There is no cost to participants.

Key Criteria

Self-represented parties in Provincial Court, Calgary, Edmonton and Grande Prairie or Court of Queen's Bench, Calgary.

Access

Most services are provided in-person.

Dispute Resolution Services

Dispute Resolution Services is a group of programs offered by Alberta Justice and Solicitor General in collaboration with the Courts of Alberta. Dispute Resolution Services' programs help Albertans to find appropriate solutions for family and non-family issues that may otherwise require court intervention. Programs are located in multiple cities across Alberta and are available to qualifying parties at no cost.

Dispute Resolution Programs include:

- Provincial Court Civil Mediation
- Family Mediation
- Child and Family Services Mediation
Dispute Resolution Officer (Calgary) and Child Support
Resolution (Edmonton)
- Brief Conflict Intervention

For more information:

dispute.resolution@gov.ab.ca

Provincial Court Civil Mediation

Objective

Provincial Court Civil Mediation offers mediation at no charge to parties with civil claims in the Provincial Court. The program aims to help parties reach a negotiated settlement instead of going to trial. The program is available throughout Alberta.

Mediations are carried out by trained and skilled practitioners whose names are listed on a roster. A team of two mediators guides the parties through the mediation process. The program is governed by Regulation 271/97 of the Provincial Court Act.

Cost

There is no cost to the parties.

Key Criteria

- For the matter to be eligible for mediation, a Dispute Note must be filed in the Provincial Court.

Access

Referrals to the programs may come in three ways:

- The Court may direct the action for mediation
- The Mediation Co-ordinator may refer the action for mediation
- Parties may request a mediation appointment at the time they file their Notice of Claim or Dispute Note

What happens after the Mediation?

If the matter settles at mediation, an agreement is drafted and placed in the court file. If the matter does not settle, a party may choose to have their matter heard before a judge by completing the required forms. The parties are subsequently sent information about their court date by the trial coordinator.

Family Mediation

Objective

Families are provided with the opportunity to meet with a Mediator who assists them to communicate, negotiate and to cooperate focusing on the needs of the child(ren) when resolving disputes. Mediators encourage parties to work collaboratively and avoid the adversarial court process. At the end of their mediation session, participants are provided with a Mediation Report that summarizes any agreements made. The Mediation Report is not signed, however parties are informed how to use the Report to obtain a Court Order or binding agreement should they wish to do so. Mediation usually occurs in person but may occur via telephone or video conferencing when appropriate and available.

Issues that may be addressed in Family Mediation:

- Parenting plans
- Contact (time with a child) issues
- Guardianship
- Communication
- Child support
- Spousal support
- Some property matters

Cost

There is no cost to families who meet Resolution Services financial eligibility criteria.

Key Criteria

- Must have at least one dependent child (under 18 years of age, or 18 years and over and eligible for continued child support).
- One party must have a gross annual income of less than $40,000.
- Mediation cases are screened for appropriateness for mediation.
- Participation is voluntary and both parents must agree to participate in mediation.
- Available to parties who are considering or have commenced actions in Provincial Court or Court of Queen's Bench.
- Court action is not required to participate in the mediation process.

Access

Referrals can be made by:

- the client
- a lawyer
- a Family Court Counsellor
- a family professional
- Justices of the Court of Queen's Bench,
- Judges of the Provincial Court.

What happens after mediation?

When an agreement is reached, a Mediation Report is prepared by the mediator. Parties are encouraged to seek independent legal advice regarding any agreement that are reach in mediation. If both parties agree, they may choose to incorporate the terms of their Mediation Report into an enforceable consent Court Order.

Lawyers may attend with their clients as support persons.

Child and Youth Services Mediation Provincial Court

Objective

- Child and Youth Services Mediation is a joint venture between Resolution Services and Alberta Human Services – Child and Youth Services Division. When a child or youth is assessed to be in need of intervention by a caseworker from Child and Youth Services, the child, youth, guardians, foster-parents and/or others with a significant connection to the child may not agree about the decisions that need to be made. Mediation is an option to resolve these disputes, providing an opportunity for the participants to talk about important issues in a safe, confidential environment. Mediation services can also be accessed in non-court contested cases and throughout the spectrum of child intervention services, including: situations of parent-teen conflict; disputes between caregivers; and highly conflictual custody and access cases. Mediation may occur via telephone or video conferencing when appropriate and available. Mediation in these disputes is enabled through the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act.

Cost

There is no cost to the parties.

Key Criteria

- On contested applications made under the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act a referral can be made by the parent/guardian, caseworker, judge, youth or lawyers
- On all Child and Youth Services matters, mediation is voluntary
- Cases are screened by Child and Youth Services for appropriateness for mediation
- Support Persons, including lawyers, may attend mediation with consent of all parties

Access

Referral to mediation can be made by any of the potential participants by calling the Child and Youth Services Mediation Supervisor or Dispute Resolution Services office at the numbers listed below.

What happens after mediation?

When mediation results in an agreement or plan, a summary report is provided to each participant. In Court related matters, the agreement/plan is placed on the child's file with Child and Youth Services and pending approval from respective guardians may be shared with the parties' lawyers or entered into the Court record. In matters that are not before the Court the agreement/plan belongs to the participants and will only be shared with others, including the caseworker, if the participants agree. Participants complete an evaluation at the end of mediation.

Dispute Resolution Officer (Calgary) and Child Support Resolution (Edmonton)

Objective

The Dispute Resolution Officer (DRO) program is available in Calgary and the Child Support Resolution (CSR) program is available in Edmonton. Meetings are designed to help parties resolve their child support disputes.

The programs are governed by Court of Queen's Bench Family Law Practice Note 4 which establishes the criteria for participation. Access to the program may also be available for matters in the Provincial Court.

The parties (and their lawyers, if applicable) meet for one hour with a DRO/CSR officer, who will discuss the matter with the parties, assess the state of their financial disclosure, describe the requirements of the Child Support Guidelines and help parties resolve their dispute. If the parties are able to reach a settlement, the DRO/CSR officer will draft a Consent Order which is submitted to the court for review. If parties are unable to resolve their issues in the meeting, the DRO/CSR officer sets out next step(s) for the parties.

Cost

There is no cost to the parties for DRO/CSR meetings.

Key Criteria

Dispute Resolution Officer Program - Calgary

- Mandatory for all applications for child support matters in the Court of Queen's Bench.
- DRO meetings are available on a voluntary basis for applications for child support in Provincial Court.

Child Support Resolution Program - Edmonton

- Mandatory for all applications for child support by self-represented parties in the Court of Queen's Bench.
- CSR meetings can be ordered in by a Judge in Provincial Court

Access

Individuals can register for these programs in person or by telephone.

Brief Conflict Intervention

Objective

Brief Conflict Intervention (BCI) is a service for parents who are parenting apart and having difficulties resolving a parenting dispute. Up to ten hours of solution-focused intervention from a specialized, roster clinician is provided.

The clinician helps the parents to better understand the needs of their child(ren) during separation or divorce, to gain greater understanding of the conflict and its effects on their child(ren), and to reach an agreement (when possible) regarding their specific dispute. This Program has been demonstrated to be effective in reducing future court activity.

The clinician may:

- conduct parent, parent-child, and child sessions;
- educate about child(ren)'s developmental needs and abilities and the quality of parent-child relationships;
- educate about the adverse effects of parental conflict on child development;
- explore family and individual strengths;
- examine problem solving skills and conflict resolution style and discuss new possibilities or alternatives;
- assist to resolve identified issues and create (or draft) parenting agreements that may be made;
- explore further options to assist the participants (i.e.: individual therapy, courses/classes, individual assignments, access resources, etc.);
- help focus on parenting in the future.

Cost

There is no cost to the parties who meet the Resolution Services eligibility criteria, however the parties are expected to cover their own travel and accommodation costs, if any are required to attend appointments.

Key Criteria

- Parents who are parenting apart & having difficulties resolving a parenting dispute
- Brief Conflict Intervention may be ordered by the court
- Both parents must agree to participate in the intervention
- The parents are required to attempt mediation prior to accessing this service
- One of the parents must have a gross income less than $40,000 per year
- There should be no active Child Intervention involvement or family violence issues being addressed by the court
- Resolution Services must approve eligibility for the Intervention.

Access

Referrals can be made by:

- the court
- lawyers
- mediator
- family professionals
- the parents

What happens after the intervention?

The clinician prepares a report of the intervention. The report identifies the issues that were resolved and those that remain in dispute, and any agreements that the parents made during the Intervention. The report is provided to each parent, and to the court if the court directed the Intervention. The report does not contain recommendations for the court.
